EDWARD TRAVIS

TO those brave WASHINGTON, these humble lays.
I dedicate as emblems of thy praise:
Mere emblematick, for can any tell
The numerous virtues which within the dwell.
All language fails, ideas are too low,
To fix thy value, or thy worth to show;
Thy name in future ages far will shine
Above the heathen heroes cold divine.
Great, just, and good, such epithets as these
Are really yours, for me they do not please.
Saviour of thy country, mankind's friend
Attributes due, yet they want leave my end;
They all are false, the flatterers worn out tone,
I'd have thy reputation to be alone.
Some words new moulded, which may cause to rise
The Soldier's courage in his sparkling eyes.
To make the youthful blood red-dy flow,
And on the cheek its mantling colour glow,
Rouse the torpidness of heavy age,
To vigour, valor, and a flaming rage.
To cause the mind with comprehensive scope,
Conceive all goodness in a single scope.
Why let me pause, -- By Jove I'd name the man,
In these few words, -- THE BEST VIRGINIAN.
These words eternal, fixed, forever be,
Whenever mentioned rouse each thought to thee.
