CW board approves 2000 budget, moves forward on hotels, Visitor Center renovations

At its fall meeting in Williamsburg Nov. 11-13, the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation Board of Trustees approved a 2000 operating budget of $205 million and a capital budget of $22 million for the first six months of the year. These expenditures represent significant investments in Colonial Williamsburg's people, place and purpose and are consistent with the ambitious goals of the organization's strategic plan.

In action related to the renovation of the hotels and Visitor Center, the board appropriated funds to continue the project planning and begin construction of the central plant at the Williamsburg Inn and Lodge. Board members reviewed a funding plan for the hotels and Visitor Center renovation project and toured new model rooms at the Inn, Lodge and Williamsburg Woodlands.

The board also heard reports on the plans for Merchants Square, Y2K readiness and the comprehensive fund-raising campaign.

During the weekend, board members and their spouses toured the recently-refurbished Peyton Randolph House and the "Holiday Magic" and "A Tasha Tudor Christmas" exhibits at the Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Center, enjoyed a Williamsburg Institute program and met with Martha Washington character interpreter Mary Wiseman, both in and out of character.

Members of the board were present at the Wallace Collections and Conservation Building at Bruton Heights School Education Center where an inaugural award for outstanding commitment to the preservation and care of collections was presented to Colonial Williamsburg by Heritage Preservation and the American Institute for Conservation.

In addition, board members attended the dedication of the new Williamsburg-

HPI becomes Colonial Williamsburg Company

To better reflect the broad range of business activities at Colonial Williamsburg, the foundation subsidiary previously known as Colonial Williamsburg Hotel Properties Inc. has been renamed Colonial Williamsburg Company. The Board of Directors of the subsidiary, in addition to providing guidance to Colonial Williamsburg's hotels and restaurants, also will oversee other foundation business activities including products, commercial properties, Merchants Square and other commercial rental properties.

"We are making significant investments in all these businesses," said Colonial Williamsburg acting president Rick Nahm, noting the hotel renovations, expansion of the products licensing and mail order catalog programs and the ambitious plans for Merchants Square. "This change clarifies the way the board governs several of our key business units and will help us to maximize the return on those investments that directly support our educational mission."

Nahm noted Colonial Williamsburg Company is similar to a framework the organization had in place for several decades. From 1934 to 1970, Williamsburg Restoration Inc. was the wholly-owned Colonial Williamsburg subsidiary that encompassed Colonial Williamsburg's hotels, restaurants, products and commercial properties. The name change to Colonial Williamsburg Company is effective immediately.

CW boards of trustees, directors welcome new members

The Colonial Williamsburg Foundation Board of Trustees and the Colonial Williamsburg Company Board of Directors, at their fall meetings here Nov. 11-13, welcomed two new members, Afsaneh Beschloss and Robert M. Solmson.

Beschloss has joined the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation Board of Trustees. She is vice president and treasurer of The World Bank in Washington, D.C. A native of Tehran, Iran, Beschloss earned an undergraduate degree in economics from the University of Kent in Canterbury, England, and a master's degree in economics from St. Antony's College, Oxford University.

She is married to Michael Beschloss, a historian specializing in the American presidency. They have two sons and reside in

Robert M. Solmson

Washington, D.C.

Solmson joins the Board of Directors of Colonial Williamsburg Company, formerly Colonial Williamsburg Hotel Properties Inc. He is chairman and chief executive officer of RFS Hotel Investors Inc., a Memphis-based real estate investment trust that owns and manages 61 hotels in 24 states, with a total of approximately 9,000 rooms.

Prior to the formation of RFS, Solmson cofounded and led a multi-faceted real estate firm involved in the development, ownership and management of hotels, office and industrial buildings and shopping centers in the Southeast and Midwest.

Solmson also has served as a commercial loan officer for National Bank of Commerce and vice president for long-range planning at United Tennessee Bancshares

John C. Beck

Corp. He holds a degree in economics from Washington and Lee University in Lexington, Va.

He serves on the board of directors of Independent Bank, Morgan Keegan and Co., Memphis Jewish Foundation, Dixon Gallery and Gardens and WKNO and is chairman of the board of Memphis Opportunity Scholarship Trust.

He is married with two grown children and resides in Memphis.

"We are very fortunate to have these two extraordinary individuals joining Colonial Williamsburg as board members," said Colin Campbell, chairman of the Board of Trustees. "Both Afsaneh Beschloss and Robert Solmson are highly respected experts in their respective fields and we look forward to having them share their insights and guidance with us as we move ahead with our ambitious plans."

During the weekend, the Board of Trustees held a black-tie reception and dinner in the Regency Room of the Williamsburg Inn honoring three members who retired at this meeting: John C. Beck, Edward C. Joullian III and Robert S. Wilson.

Beck, a senior partner with the New York investment firm Beck, Mack and Oliver, has been a member of the Board of Trustees since 1986 and most recently chaired the Board's Investment Committee.

Joullian, chairman of Mustang Fuel Corp. in Oklahoma City and Joullian Vineyards in Carmel Valley, Calif., has been a trustee since 1990 and most recently

Plans to upgrade Colonial Williamsburg Company's hospitality facilities — making them a world-class destination for the 21st century — are going ahead on schedule. Board members toured model rooms at the Williamsburg Inn, Williamsburg Lodge and Williamsburg Woodlands during their meetings here Nov. 11-13. Employees, retirees and their families will have the opportunity to tour model rooms during an open house 3 to 8 p.m. Dec. 12.

Physical work on the projects, estimated to cost $100 million, will start January 2000. Renovation of that scale is necessary for a very simple reason — the hotel properties' aging facilities have building systems that don't work and the facilities are losing their appeal to both individual visitors and to groups seeking modern conference facilities. If that trend were allowed to continue, the Colonial Williamsburg family would face shrinking business. That would mean fewer jobs, less overtime and reduced resources with which to keep employees' compensation and benefits the highest in this region's hospitality industry.

The goal of the renovation is to assure that our best days — as a place to visit, a place to learn, a place to work — are still ahead of us. Physical improvement spells more customers as well as better financial prospects and an improved atmosphere for the workforce.

That does not mean surrendering any of Colonial Williamsburg's special charm. For instance, the Williamsburg Inn's gracious exterior will look essentially the same as it does today. So will the Regency style of the interior. But the Inn's aging systems — including plumbing, heating and electric circuitry — demand replacement after more than 60 years of use. Most of the guestrooms that were considered large and luxurious in the 1930s no longer meet the demands of today's visitors. So they will be upgraded significantly, just as accommodations at competing hotels are being improved.

Specific needs at the Williamsburg Lodge and the Williamsburg Woodlands are somewhat different. But the general goal is the same: to keep up with the changing expectations and needs of our customers. The Woodlands, now more than 40 years old, has been losing business to the newest area competitors. Its systems fail routinely and its building design no longer meets the needs of families with young children and adult and youth groups. Patching the present structure would cost millions but still leave the Woodlands behind its rivals. That is why a new building is needed.

In the long run, all these renovations will be very good news for everyone who has a stake in the future of Colonial Williamsburg's hotels and restaurants.

For continuing updates on the renovation of the hotels, watch future issues of CW News. The next update will feature photos and more information on model rooms.

Williamsburg Inn meets global Standards of Excellence

The Williamsburg Inn at Colonial Williamsburg has been chosen as a member of Preferred Hotels and Resorts Worldwide Inc. Preferred Hotels and Resorts Worldwide Inc., an exclusive luxury brand of distinctive hotels and resorts that share global Standards of Excellence, has selected the world-renowned Williamsburg Inn for membership. Established over 30 years ago by seven of the world's finest hotels, Preferred Hotels and Resorts Worldwide was the first organization to create an industry standard for quality and accommodations at luxury hotels and resorts.

Today, Preferred's Standards of Excellence® program — marked by its 1600 line, 5800 point unannounced inspection process — ensures customers that its distinguished members provide the highest standards of service and hospitality worldwide. "We are honored to be part of an exclusive collection of world-class resorts and hotels. The Preferred designation is synonymous with the highest level of amenities and services available in the resort industry," said Bruno Brunner, general manager of the Williamsburg Inn.

A Mobil Travel Guide Four-Star and AAA Four-Diamond property, the Williamsburg Inn is ranked as one of Gourmet magazine's 1999 "Rooms At The Top," and appears on Condé Nast Traveler magazine's 1999 Gold List. The recipient of Successful Meetings magazine's 1999 Pinnacle Award, 1999 ACE Award and Meetings & Conventions magazine's 1999 Gold Key Award, the Inn was rated last year among the "Top 100 Hotels in the World" by Travel and Leisure magazine.

"Enslaved," the second Electronic Field Trip of the school year was seen by students in more than 600 schools across the nation. The hour-long program detailed the origins of slavery in colonial Virginia. Former Colonial Williamsburg director of African-American interpretation and presentations Christy Matthews served as the historian providing a 20th-century perspective on the issue.

Cast your vote for the "Person of the Century"

Colonial Williamsburg News wants to know your nomination for "Person of the Century." TIME magazine initiated this contest, which can be found on their website at time.com. TIME's Person of the Century, as defined by the editors of this weekly news magazine, is that person who, for better or worse, most influenced the course of history over the past 100 years. The Dec. 31, 1999 issue of TIME magazine will feature the TIME 100, the 100 most influential people in this century and the magazine's editors also will announce the "Person of the Century."

The first person to correctly guess TIME's "Person of the Century" will receive a free dinner for two (excluding alcoholic beverages) at the Williamsburg Lodge compliments of the marketing communications division.

TIME's candidates are listed in five fields of endeavor: Leaders & Revolutionaries; Artists & Entertainers; Builders & Titans; Scientists & Thinkers; and Heroes & Icons.

• Leaders & Revolutionaries. People who helped define the political and social fabric of our time are: Theodore Roosevelt, Vladimir Ilyich Lenin, Margaret Sanger, Mao Zedong, Winston Churchill, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Eleanor Roosevelt, Adolf Hitler, Mohandas Gandhi, David Ben-Gurion, Ho Chi Minh, Martin Luther King, Ayatullah Ruhollah Khomeini, Margaret Thatcher, Lech Walesa, Ronald Reagan, Mikhail Gorbachev, Pope John Paul II, the Unknown Rebel and Nelson Mandela.

• Artists & Entertainers. Pioneers of human expression who enlightened and enlivened us are: Pablo Picasso, Martha Graham, Le Corbusier, Igor Stravinsky, Coco Chanel, James Joyce, T.S. Eliot, Louis Armstrong, Charlie Chaplin, Marlon Brando, Rodgers and Hammerstein, Frank Sinatra, Lucille Ball, The Beatles, Bob Dylan, Aretha Franklin, Jim Henson, Steven Spielberg and Bart Simpson.

• Builders & Titans. Innovators who changed how the world works are: Henry Ford, David Sarnoff, Charles Merrill, Willis Carrier, Lucky Luciano, William Levitt, Leo Burnett, Ray Kroc, Pete Rozelle, Louis B. Mayer, Amadeo Giannini, Stephen Bechtel, Walt Disney, Juan Trippe, Walter Reuther, Thomas Watson Jr., Estee Lauder and Akio Morita.

• Scientists & Thinkers. People who overthrew our inherited ideas about logic, language, learning, mathematics, economics and even space and time are: Sigmund Freud, Leo Baekeland, Wilbur and Orville Wright, Albert Einstein, Alexander Fleming, Robert Goddard, Jonas Salk, Edwin Hubble, Ludwig Wittgenstein, Jean Piaget, Enrico Fermi, Louis, Mary and Richard Leakey, Philo Farnsworth, Kurt Godel, Rachel Carson, William Shockley, Alan Turing, John Maynard Keynes, James Watson and Francis Crick and Tim Berners-Lee.

• Heroes & Icons. People who articulate the longings of the last 100 years, exemplify courage, selflessness, exuberance, superhuman ability and amazing grace are: Emmeline Pankhurst, Helen Keller, Charles Lindbergh, Bill Wilson, the American G.I., Jackie Robinson, Anne Frank, Billy Graham, Edmund Hillary and Tenzing Norgay, Rosa Parks, Che Guevara, Marilyn Monroe, the Kennedys, Muhammad Ali, Bruce Lee, Pele, Harvey Milk, Mother Teresa, Princess Diana and Andrei Sakharov.

18th-century millers kept town of Williamsburg grounded

The Williamsburg area offered many milling opportunities and choice locations during the 18th century. Several mills were erected in the town or in its immediate vicinity prior to the Revolution.

The accounts of windmills in Williamsburg are limited. First in 1723, William Robertson, clerk of the General Assembly, lawyer and land speculator, decided to John Holloway the four lots where the William Robertson Windmill is today. An American soldier who kept a diary of his experiences during the Revolution and mentioned being "near the windmill, in Williamsburg" made a second account of a windmill in Williamsburg one night before the siege of Yorktown. Finally, an unknown French mapmaker, presumed to be in the service of Rochambeau, drew a very careful and complete billeting map of Williamsburg and the buildings in it. On this map appears a representation of a post mill just on the southern edge of the town.

Tradesman Neil Black has gathered the above facts and others to tell the story of 18th-century milling at Robertson's Windmill during the program "Mills and Milling: Operating the Windmill." "The town miller operated the windmill and grew corn around the mill. He often would receive a percentage of the mill he ground as payment for his services but he also accepted 'ready cash,'" Black said.

The miller was considered so essential to the community that — along with certain officials of the colony, clergymen, plantation overseers, the gaoler and schoolmasters — he was exempt from service in the militia and church services.

Black also shares an interesting bit of history about one of the occupational hazards of the miller's job. "Stone and slivers of metal from his pick often became imbedded under the miller's skin on the back his hand when he had to dress the stone — pick the stone with a millbill to freshen the grooves that cut the grain in the quern," explained Black. "The miller looking for work, could prove his experience by 'showing his metal' through the back of his hands."

CW salutes veterans

Photos by Kate Lanier

Colonial Williamsburg paid tribute to the veterans of the U.S. armed forces during a Veteran's Day ceremony Thursday, Nov. 11. School and group services director Pete Pitard was the keynote speaker. The Colonial Williamsburg Fife & Drum Corps lead the costumed colonial militia and military veterans as they marched from the Capitol to Market Square at 4:15 p.m. On Market Square, the ceremony honored the nation's veterans with cannon salutes, beginning with the veterans of the original 13 British colonies and followed by salutes to veterans of each American conflict.

Air Force retiree begins his third career as a foundation volunteer

Colonial Williamsburg volunteer Walter Dandridge, a retiree from the Air Force and General Electric, began his third career volunteering with Colonial Williamsburg in April.

The best thing about volunteering, he said, is meeting new people. "I like contact with visitors from all over the world," he said. "I like to get one-on-one with people."

He gives orientation tours on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Orientation tours, which begin at the Gateway, give visitors an overview of the Colonial Williamsburg. "Visitors ask me about what's going on here on a specific day," he said. "Many people want to know what happened here during the Civil War."

Dandridge grew up in the Williamsburg/James City County area. He attended elementary school in Croaker and spent his high school years at Bruton High School. In 1945, he left his hometown "I was drafted into the Air Force," he said, "where I spent 25 years."

He retired from the Air Force in 1968 and accepted a position as an engineering technician with General Electric in Burlington, Vt. After 10 years with General Electric, he moved to Stratford, Conn., to work at the Naval Air Systems Command in the helicopter procurement department. He retired for a second time in 1986.

Dandridge did some consulting work with Kamand Aerospace before moving back to Williamsburg in 1990, 45 years after he left.

He has some fond memories of his hometown. For instance, he remembers the first time he saw President Franklin Delano Roosevelt like it was yesterday. "I was standing along the fence at Bruton Parish Church," he said. "The fence seemed bigger then."

When Dandridge was only seven years old, his parents brought him to Colonial Williamsburg to see Roosevelt motor down Duke of Gloucester to the Capitol to dedicate "the most historic avenue in America." "There were marines and guards with guns along the street standing at parade rest," he said. "The streets were lined with people."

Dandridge and the other visitors saw the president waving in an open Packard as the motorcade passed by. He attended the Oct. 17 re-enactment of the event. "I brought my 5-year-old granddaughter, Laurel," he said. "I wonder if 50 years from now she will remember it."
